June 2011

"We'll open our doors with 60 beds, but I expect Madison Hospital to grow at a very fast pace. We've designed the hospital with the ability to easily expand so we can provide the scope of services this community deserves close to home."

- Mary Lynne Wright,
Madison Hospital President

The most recent aerial photo of Madison Hospital shows tremendous progress. Despite some challenges presented by the storm-related power outage in late April, construction progress is still on-track for Madison Hospital to open for patients in February 2012.

Melissa Taylor, RN, MSN, has been named Director of Clinical Operations for Madison Hospital.

Taylor will be responsible for providing leadership in the planning and delivery of patient-focused care in all areas of the hospital. She is a 28-year employee of Huntsville Hospital and has been primarily involved in women's health, having spent the past 9 years as manager of labor & delivery and antepartum at Huntsville Hospital for Women & Children.

Individuals seeking employment at Madison Hospital can expect to see job postings online this fall at huntsvillehospital.org/jobs (select "hospital employment"). Madison Hospital will eventually employ about 300 staff members, mostly in clinical areas.
